

Man Shing Tse
Chief Ethics Officer

Tse heads the Ethics Office of AIIB. As Chief Ethics Officer, he contributes to policy development and policy compliance and provides advice on all matters relating to ethics to ensure that Board Officials and Bank Personnel observe and perform their functions consistent with the ethical standards required by their respective Code of Conduct. It is also his responsibility to promote awareness of the ethics mandate of the Bank and provide tailor-made training to various business units. Before joining AIIB in September 2019 as a consultant, and later as the Chief Ethics Officer in August 2020, Tse served the government of Hong Kong, China for 40 years with his extensive experience in the field of ethics. From 2010 to 2016, he was the former Director of Corruption Prevention, promoting clean governance through the promulgation of the sample code of conduct to be observed by all public officers in Hong Kong, China. He also handled complaints from prisoners in the capacity of the Official Justice of the Peace since 2008. In his previous employments, he dealt with cases of professional misconduct of teaching staff, particularly in relation to violence, sexual harassment and sexual abuse of students, and served as prosecutor for professional misconduct cases for all medical practitioners and dentists. He has an undergraduate degree in Business Administration from the Chinese University of Hong Kong and a post-graduate diploma in Personnel Management from the London School of Economics. Tse is a national of China.